

March of New Brunswick's 104th Regiment of Foot

A Very Canadian Story

During the War of 1812, the winter of 1813 was one of extreme cold and heavy snows. Between February and April, New Brunswick's 104th Regiment of Foot marched more than 1100 kilometres from Fredericton, New Brunswick to Kingston, Ontario to reinforce British troops and thwart an expected invasion by the Americans. This effort by a regiment of poorly clothed, frostbitten and hungry soldiers stands as an incredible feat in military history.

Legend

- March Route of the 104th
- - - - - Movement to muster site
- Known overnight stopping points
- Points passed by the marchers, may have been overnight stopping point

THE ST. JOHN RIVER SOCIETY
LA SOCIÉTÉ DU FLEUVE SAINT-JEAN
www.stjohnriver.org